Hope For Health (HFH) is a program based on Elcho Island helping Yolngu people across East Arnhem Land, NT, to transform their health. Hope For Health builds on traditional practice, with modern nutrition and experiential health education, changing the way Yolngu people see themselves and their power to make healthy choices for the reclamation of rom walngaw - the Yolngu way to vitality.

Through Hope for Health the Yolngu people could end the epidemic of chronic disease destroying their communities. In our first two years of operation the program helped more than 40 chronic disease sufferers to transform their health, creating widespread interest in our results and our culturally integrated methodology. In two years over 400 local Yolngu people have accessed nutrition education, cooking skills and exercise activities. Demand for our help stretches across Arnhem land and beyond. This program offers a real solutions for the Aboriginal health crisis.
